

Any rule requiring written consent before faxing to a business should exempt job applicants and their agents. This would place undue hardship on job hunters including agents who are working on their behalf to find them gainful employment which should be the intention of any government agency. Job creation, not stagnation